Our story

Mar Andino finds its origins in the Andes Mountains. Our Steelhead is raised in the highest farming sites in the world, in the Peruvian Andean Peaks, and in the secluded and pristine Argentinian Patagonia. The purity of the water in these extraordinary places, which springs from the mountaintops of our planet's longest mountain range, provides the ideal environment for the farming of Steelhead. This, along with the high-water renewal rates of the lakes we are in, allow us to raise our fish without antibiotics, which makes our Steelhead a sustainable alternative to prefer.

Steelhead has an intense red color, firmer texture and a lower percentage of fat than Atlantic Salmon, which gives it a more balanced flavor and makes it an excellent ingredient for all kinds of preparations, even the most demanding ones, like sashimi.
