Packaging & Supply

Shipping: Our fresh products are shipped in Styrofoam boxes and transported with gel packs, ensuring cold chain compliance for air freight. This process guarantees that our products arrive in the USA just days after harvesting in the Peruvian Sierra or the Argentinian Patagonia.

Constant Supply: For over 9 years, we have consistently provided our customers with fresh Steelhead every week without interruption.

Quality Control: We hold ASC (Aquaculture Stewardship Council) and BAP (Best Aquaculture Practices) certifications, meeting the highest standards at every production stage. Additionally, we are certified Antibiotic-Free by Control Union.

Our story

Mar Andino finds its origins in the Andes Mountains. Our Steelhead is raised in the highest farming sites in the world, in the Peruvian Andean Peaks, and in the secluded and pristine Argentinian Patagonia. The purity of the water in these extraordinary places, which springs from the mountaintops of our planet's longest mountain range, provides the ideal environment for the farming of Steelhead. This, along with the high-water renewal rates of the lakes we are in, allow us to raise our fish without antibiotics, which makes our Steelhead a sustainable alternative to prefer.

Steelhead has an intense red color, firmer texture and a lower percentage of fat than Atlantic Salmon, which gives it a more balanced flavor and makes it an excellent ingredient for all kinds of preparations, even the most demanding ones, like sashimi.

We invite you to discover our secret and the Natural Uniqueness of Mar Andino.
